From a Fountain

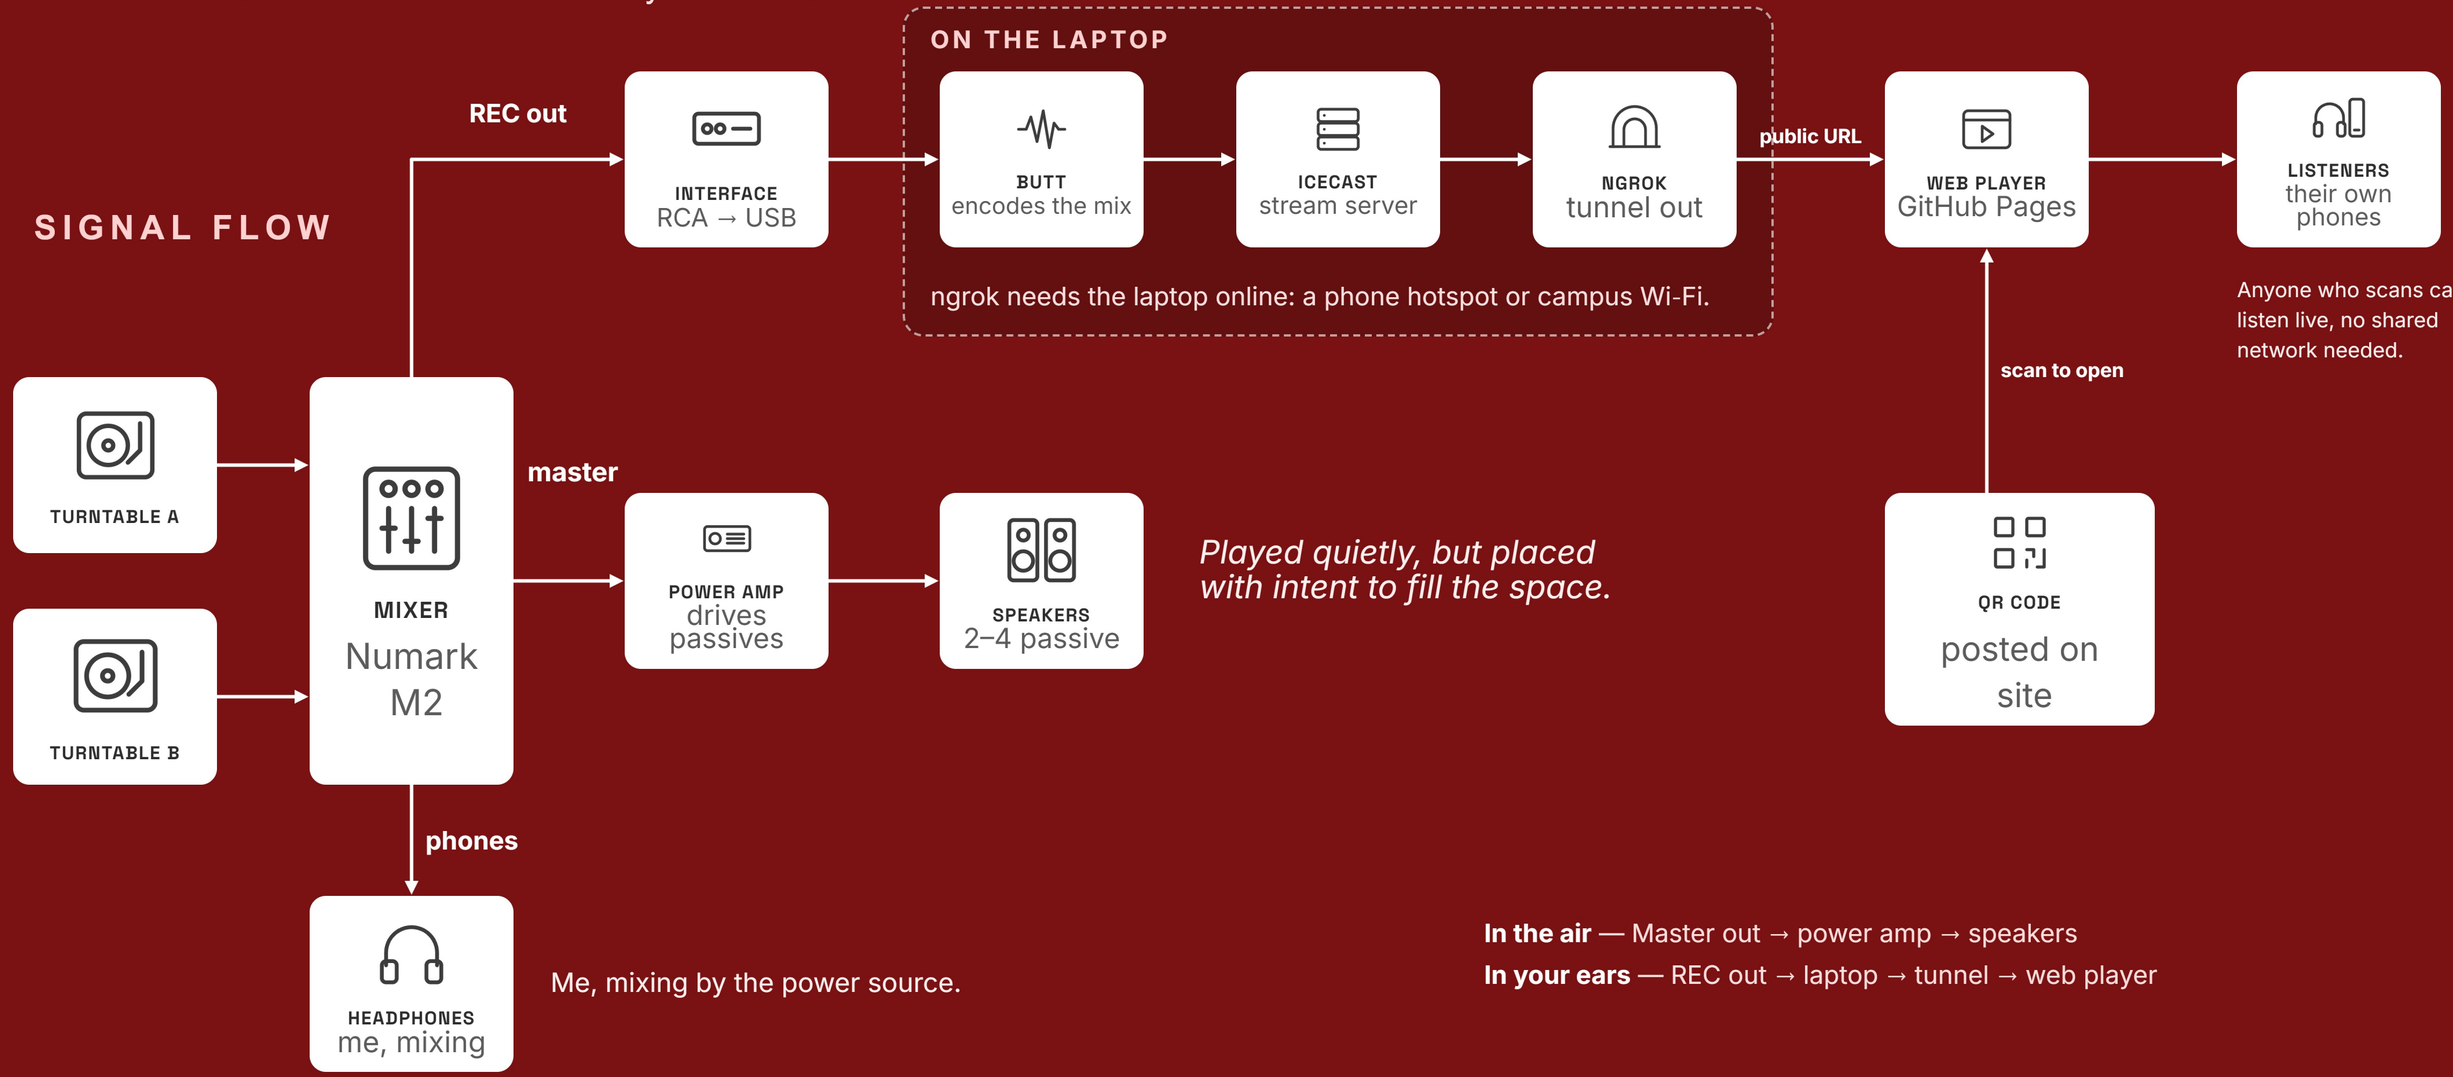

Terman Fountain - a Live Vinyl Installation

Inspired by the rise of Jazz Kissa in post WWII Japan, equipped with a newly found sense of connection to this fountain where I spent my lunches every day, my goal is to provide an enjoyable set that happens 'out of nowhere'. Given Terman Fountain's location at the heart of campus, the fountain was often used as a shortcut or general commute to or from the office. This is when I implemented the livestream element. Now, for students walking by on their way to class, blasting music in their headphones and far too distracted to observe what was going on, there still exists a low-friction invitation; come listen to music with me.

I aim to fill the visual physical space with complementary sounds. For example, ambient music at a fountain, or jazz at a high-energy cafe.

Like a "painting on the wall". It does not scream for your attention- in fact, it may go unnoticed- but patiently waiting to be enjoyed.

SIGNAL FLOW

In the air — Master out → power amp → speakers
In your ears — REC out → laptop → tunnel → web player